FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

The movement of the stock market today testified if not to an entire change at least to a modification of the bearish views recently entertained by the majority of the professional trading element and also to the presence in the market of an overextended hort interest. Preliminary signs of all this have for a day or so not been wanting. The plain tendency of the market was to become dull as it receded, so that larger and larger selling pressure was required to force prices to lower levels. The reason for the decline in the market in the last fortnight has been likewise perfectly clear. While there has been no abatement of confidence regarding the intrinsic soundness of the financial and business position and the belief has been general that at a little time further on a much higher range of stock market valuations would obtain, fear has prevailed as to the possible effect, if only for a brief period, upon the mass of specu-lative holdings in Wall Street by a rise in money rates that seemed to be portended by all indicia usually accounted trustworthy bearing upon such matters; and the view taken by substantial banking interests has been that while there was no reason to apprehend an approach of money stringency, it was doubtful what sort of reception Wall Street would give to a sustained 4 or 5 per cent. money rate after having accustomed itself to a rate only infrequently rising above 2 per cent. during the last two years. Speculators here, especially those forming what is known as the Western party, still have an acute memory of the unpleasant results of their elorts to advance prices in the face of a tightening money market in the fall of 1902. At the first threatenings this year of the repetition of such an experience they made haste to safeguard themselves after the usual manner, and many of them, it seems, not only closed out their commitments for the rise but made heavy ventures on the short side of the market. Developments along the line of higher money rates have, however, proceeded very slowly, so slowly, indeed, that the suspicion of the moment is that there may not be any high money rates seen this year at all. Evidence was afforded last Saturday of the elasticity of our banking system when occasion arises for an extension of credit. The Government grop report vesterday, which was practically the final report of the year, told of the enormous increase in wealth that the country is now about to receive from agricultural sources, and, added to the current reports of the immense volume of business of the iron and steel mills, the one industry upon which Wall Street particularly keeps its eye, made a glowing and rarely equaled statement of national prosperity. On top of this came to-day the unexpected announcement of the importation of gold, from which the natural inference was drawn that if metal remittances to this side of the water could be enforced upon such a slight rise in money rates as has already occurred here, a further small advance in these rates would bring gold in such quantity that the "money situation" would no longer form a troublous heme of Wall Street discussion. There was a rush, therefore, to buy stocks for both accounts on the Stock Exchange this afternoon, which caused a large advance in the price of all the leading shares. The strength of the market was maintained up to the close, final prices being at or very near the highest.

The engagement of gold was in bars of the value of $1,275,000 and was made by a house enjoying unusual facilities in opera-tions of this kind. It was said to be not a "special" transaction, and there are reasons for believing that if the price of bar gold in London does not rise other and larger engagements of the kind will be made. It is improbable on the other hand that the price of bar gold in London will long remain where it is to-day, and it is altogether unlikely that with France, Germany, Argentine and the United States pulling at its gold supplies and a Russian and other national government loans impending the English market will fail to interpose those obstacles to the export of the yellow metal which it traditionally and powerfully uses. Conideration of this should temper somewhat the enthusiasm concerning the turn taken by affairs which was unquestionably felt in Wall Street to-day. There was no news influencing the market to-day aside from the matter of gold imports. An official declaration of a scrip dividend of 33½ per cent. on the common stock of the Slose-Sheffield company had been long foreshadowed. According to the Government crop report there was a slight improvement in the condition of cotton last week, the spring wheat harvest is now practically completed and corn is making unchecked progress toward maturity. Sterling exchange opened weak, rallied upon the announcement of the gold imports and closed the banks to the Sub-Treasury and to the interior of the country still continues, the loss to the Sub-Treasury up to this morning amounting to $3,511,000, while during the day $500,000 was shipped to San Francisco. An unusually large advance in the price of crude petroleum, attributed to the increased export demand for the American product due to the destruction of the property of the oil producers in Baku, was the leading event of the day in the commodity New York Stock Exchange Sales Sept. 12. CLOSING PRICES OF UNITED STATES BONDS.

Takes untirecharge of estates, both real and personal Takes untirecharge of estates, both real and personal Takes untirecharge of estates, both real and personal and the property of labt year; it is calculated by conservative authorities that spinners have at least 560,000 bales more, of American cotton unspun than at this time last year, and in all probability there are 286,000 bales of cotton of the old crop remaining in the South. This would give a total auginus from the old crop of about 1,000,000 claes with which to eke out any possible deficiency in the next yield. As to the coming crop it is more than ordinarily difficult to arrive at any opinion owing to the fact that so much uncertainty exists as to the acreage. The Government estimated the decrease, the second estimate, as about 15 per cent. Our control of the second estimate, as about 15 per cent. Our control based their pretty reliable term Cotton Association based their cotton states and acretic to argue that the coming crop will prove fully adequate to requirements without drawing more than 50 per cent. From the surplus from the last crop. In this view they are aided to some extent by the first census report for the season, giving the amount of cotton ginned from the new crop as 469,000 bales, against 574,631 bales from the big crop of last year. This, of course, cannot be considered a clue to the size of the crop. Premature opening means a small crop, but sat this very argument was used last season by small crop advocates it loses force this year.
